AIR TRAGEDY
FATAL TO 12Airliner Crashes Into California Mountain; Probe
Mid-Air Crash

(By Associated Press)
PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Oct. 24.—After an American Airlines airplane had declared that an Army bomber was in collision with transport plane shortly before the latter crashed near here late yesterday, killing 12, a Civilian Defense airplane spotter told today of seeing the two twin-engine ships come together just before one of them crashed and struck a mountain.

Southern California Army authorities maintained a strict silence pending a military investigation. But in San Francisco, Fourth Air Force spokesmen maintained that to their knowledge no military airplane was involved in the crash of the American Airliner.

Army spokesmen on the scene said they had absolutely nothing to say about the crash, and at March field officers said they hadn't even heard about it. A military guard was thrown about the wrecked airliner, and civilians barred.

Nine Passengers Aboard

The crew of three and all nine passengers were killed, airline officials announced. Among the dead was Ralph Rainger, song writer, who composed such popular numbers as "Love in Bloom," "June in January," and "Here Lies Love."

The statement of the Airlines executive, Charles A. Rheinstrom, vice president in charge of traffic, was made in New York and released through the Airlines office here. He said:

"American Airlines flight 28, east-bound Los Angeles to New York, was in collision with Army bomber. Turn to 12 PERSONS, Page 8

ALLIES LAUNCH
OFFENSIVE IN
DESERT FIGHTGet the Jump On Rommel
Who Had Boasted of Middle East PrizeBATTLE HOLDS FATE
OF MEDITERRANEANBritain's Eighth Army Supported By Strong
Allied Force

(By Associated Press)
CAIRO, Oct. 24.—Britain's Eighth army, supported by a strong allied air force which includes American fighters, battered at field Marshal Erwin Rommel's El Alamein line today in an offensive which may decide the fate of the Mediterranean this winter.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the 50-year-old hero of Dunkerque who succeeded Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck as Middle East commander Aug. 18 during a summer lull in the desert fighting, sent his forces surging across the Egyptian no-man's-land last night.

Days of steady air attacks by British and United States fliers upon German-Italian air fields and communications opened the way for the ground push.

"Pierce fighting developed and is continuing," said a terse communique issued jointly by British headquarters and the RAF.

Fighter planes of the U. S. desert air forces were active in the final preliminaries of the long aerial preparation for the offensive, raking the Axis' forward landing grounds yesterday and escorting Allied fighter-bombers on similar missions.

The hour of attack came under a full desert moon last night but it still was too early to discern any trend.

Under a strong cover of warplanes, the Allies lunged against the enemy positions in a swirl of sandy dust with tanks and guns—many of them American-made—hurling thousands of shells at the enemy.

Thus the Allies got the jump on Rommel, who boasted in Berlin recently that he would crush their forces in the Middle East. The marsha's spectacular counteroffensive against the British push into Libya last spring carried to a point only 70 miles west of Alexandria. British supply and naval base, and there it was checked and stalled.

The extensive bombardment of British naval and air bases on Malta during the past two weeks indicated the Germans were rushing supplies across the Mediterranean to the African corps in the hope of a knockout blow.

RAF IN SECOND
RAID ON ITALYLong Range Bombers Return to Genoa, Turin,
Dropping Explosives

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Oct. 24.—The biggest raid in the RAF back in force over Italy for the second successive night, showered explosives again on Turin and Genoa last night and also on Savona in a sweep over three of Italy's northernmost provinces.

Especially at Savona, a port on the Ligurian coast about 25 miles west of Genoa and one of the chief Italian foundry centers, the Fascist communique mentioned "notable" damage.

Without specifying the numbers, the British again said the raiding armada was a "strong force" and that all but three returned safely.

All had to fly roughly 1,500 miles roundtrip, virtually the entire distance over hostile territory, and twice across the snowy peaks of the Alps.

The three bomber cities all are important as industrial and military centers and the Italians acknowledged that all were pounded with explosive and incendiary bombs.

The last time northern Italy was bombed on successive nights was Aug. 26 and 27, 1940.

Air raid alarms sounded twice in Bern, Switzerland, last night, just as they did Thursday night, when upwards of 100 bombers were reported to have damaged the arsenal city of Turin and Genoa.

The Rome radio said King Vittorio Emanuele II and the queen had spent four hours yesterday walking through the ruins and visiting the injured at Genoa, where great damage was acknowledged.

Army And Navy Planes Launch Search
For Rickenbacker, Missing In Pacific

HONOLULU, Oct. 24.—American war birds of '42 were in the sky over distant Pacific waters today searching the sea for Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, Uncle Sam's ace eagle of '18.

The War department said Rickenbacker, on an inspection trip for Lieut. General H. H. Arnold, Army Air Force commander, had not been heard from since Wednesday evening when he reported only one hour's supply of gasoline remained in his plane's tanks.

At that time, Rickenbacker and the crew of a large military plane were flying between Oahu, Hawaii, and another island in the Pacific.

United States army Hawaiian department headquarters announced that every available Army and Navy plane and surface craft from the southwest Hawaiian islands was searching for the missing fliers.

The Army did not disclose names of others aboard the plane, but it was believed here there were at least 10 persons, including the crew.

Officers here hopefully remembered that normal equipment of all such planes includes rubber life rafts. These fragile craft have saved the lives of many military fliers who have been forced down at sea in Pacific fighting. Sur-

Controversy Rages
As Cannon Return
To Cemetery DutyThe two old cannon are back in Hope cemetery, but the controversy over whether they should be there or in the scrap pile destined to be made into war materials goes merrily on.

Protests, condemning the action of the Sons of Union Veterans in reclaiming the cannon, came from all parts of the city yesterday and today. "Put patriotism ahead of sentiment," was the oft repeated remark aimed at the organization.

Several members of Philip Triem camp, S. of U. V., joined in the protests, declaring they did not favor the action of the camp council in taking the cannon from the junk yard back to the cemetery.

That all of the cemetery trustees were in favor of donating the relics to the scrap drive, and gave their assent when no word of opposition came from the Sons, was the reply of A. E. Beardmore, one of the trustees, to a letter from H. D. Huttenhower, camp secretary, protesting the so-called "consecration" of the cannon.

Beardmore said he was informed by the camp commander that in the latter's opinion the organization had nothing to do with the cannon, and that later a member of the camp drive organizer that it was all right to add the cannon to the scrap collection.

"Apparently there is some difference of opinion in your own membership and I would suggest that you submit a certified copy of the members at your meeting and the resolution demanding the replacement of the cannon in question," Beardmore told Huttenhower.

"Perhaps you are not aware of the fact that the management of Hope Cemetery has been subject to severe criticism because the Civil War cannon had not been donated to our government and put to war use. Outside of the sentimental defense council.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Administration leaders hastily summoned reinforcements today in an effort to beat off a powerful attempt in the Senate to compel a year's training before 18 and 19 year old youths could be sent into combat.

Facing possible defeat despite the publicly expressed opposition of President Roosevelt against any amendment to the teen age draft bill, the administration lieutenants prepared to fight a delaying action until several absentees could arrive later in the day for the unusual Saturday session.

Their hope of success was buoyed by reports that seven potential supporters of the amendment and some home overnight to patch political forces and transact other business and were not likely to be present for a test vote on a proposal by Senator O'Daniel (D-Tex.)

Action on the O'Daniel amendment or some similar proposal, was expected to clear the way for a final vote on the measure, possibly before nightfall.

All-Out Assault By Enemy Is Believed
Near; Allies ActiveMacArthur Bombers Attack Japanese Flotilla, Inflicing Losses; Jap Landings On Russell Island
Are Reported

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Japanese invasion forces, dealt a severe naval loss by Allied bombers in the southwestern Pacific, apparently were closing in on embattled Guadalcanal island today for an all-out assault on the American-held airbase.

Disclosing that the Japanese had landed on Russell island, about 30 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, naval spokesmen acknowledged that the invaders might have established similar positions on other neighboring small islands.

While the Navy reported yesterday additional destruction of 12 Japanese planes and repulse of a second enemy "feeler" attack on the Guadalcanal airfield, heavy bombers under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australian command sank or badly damaged 10 Japanese vessels including a cruiser.

Raiding with "deadly effect," Allied headquarters said, the bombers dumped explosives on the cruiser, a destroyer and eight transports or cargo ships at Rabaul, New Britain, just west of Bougainville island in the Solomons.

The low-level attack before dawn yesterday was believed to have sunk the cruiser, destroyers and two large merchant vessels while severely damaging the other ships, the communique said.

The Japanese flank attack on troops holding the Guadalcanal airfield occurred Oct. 21 and was the second in two days to be driven back. It was regarded as a test of the American force's strength.

Intercept Jap Planes
On the same day, seven enemy bombers with a fighter escort sought to bomb the airfield. Grumman Wildcat fighters intercepted the Japanese fighter planes and destroyed six of them, the Navy added, at the cost of two "Wildcats."

Several groups of enemy planes renewed the attack the next day. Flying conditions were poor, the Navy said, but the Wildcats shot down an entire attacking group of five bombers.

American positions on Espiritu Santo island in the New Hebrides were shelled the night of Oct. 22 by an enemy ship, presumably a submarine.

The Allied bombing raid on Japanese naval concentrations, believed to be sparring for an invasion opening, was the second in two days.

The Allied and American aerial attacks since the strong enemy naval forces were sighted about 10 days ago thus far have sunk or damaged five Japanese cruisers, 10 destroyers and 14 other ships, mostly transports.

The unsuccessful Japanese drive for the Allied Port Moresby base in New Guinea was subjected to a continued Australian offensive which has succeeded in pushing enemy troops back toward their Kokoda invasion base.

SAVING CANNON OR COUNTRY?

Some members of the Sons of Union Veterans are making a great fuss about two old cannon. Fortunately, all members of this organization do not think it is more important to preserve the relics than it is to help win the war. If the cannon had some historic value it might be different. All the value they have is sentimental. "They are not to be considered in the same category as cannon erected as monuments or relics in parks and public squares," says the secretary of the Veterans. Why not? They were purchased from a government arsenal, which distributed hundreds of them throughout the country. They are mementos and relics, just as were the German machine gun, helmet, bayonet, etc., which the American Legion willingly donated to the scrap drive.

Is sentiment more important than patriotism? Trustees of Hope cemetery didn't think so, and all who are interested in doing everything possible to back up the young men who are fighting our battles in the far corners of the world don't think so. What will the Sons of Union Veterans say when those young men return home and ask them what they contributed to help save our country from the claws of Hitler and Hirohito? The few who kept those cannon from going into war production may feel proud of their action, but they seem to be a little group all by themselves.

LAVAL TOUCHES BOTTOM

Pierre Laval's curious reasoning in appealing for French workers to help Germany in order to keep France from being punished in case Germany wins the war can't be explained by merely casting slurs on the character of this one French opportunist. Vastly more is concerned here than the personal character of Laval.

His advice to his countrymen represents, rather, the ultimate humiliation of France under the policy of appeasement. Laval has followed it through the voluntary phase that helped to ruin France when his predecessors were in control to the present involuntary phase. Today it is not a Frenchman who determines the terms of appeasement, but Adolf Hitler. Laval merely follows Hitler's orders, while attempting to rationalize them in terms of France's welfare.

It is his lot and apparently his desire to be the symbol of the shame that inevitably comes from an attempt to survive by surrendering principles. In the effort to sell his countrymen into slavery he has touched bottom.

HITLER'S TYPEWRITER STRATEGISTS

The title of this editorial is intentionally misleading, because there aren't any typewriter strategists in Germany. Whatever the kibitzers have to say about military affairs is whispered behind the hand.

Adolf Hitler is the only expert with official standing. He consults his generals and admirals, but if they don't agree with him it's likely to be their last consultation. There is no friction whatever.

Those who thought Germany was making a mistake by tackling Russia, for instance, never had a chance to say so in public. If the German people thought so, they told one another about it furtively.

Those who thought Hitler was making a mistake by committing himself to take Stalingrad before winter kept their own counsel, or bore the consequences. It may turn out yet, of course, that the fuhrer is infallible, but if it turns out otherwise it will be some comfort, perhaps, to know that the decision which ruined Germany and proved to be the turning point of the war was all his.

BURNING DOWN THE BARN

With more shock than sympathy the country hears that congress may be hamstringed by prohibitionists threatening to tie up the bill lowering the draft age to 18. Their objective is to forbid the sale of alcoholic beverages in and around army and navy posts.

Most old soldiers and most new ones probably would tell the prohibitionists that the use of alcoholic beverages had better be left in the hands of the same men who would have to handle the bootlegging problem in post areas if the United States had nationwide prohibition—the officers of the army and navy. As Secretary of War Stimson has expressed it, "Temperance cannot be obtained by prohibition applied to military personnel any more than it can be obtained by prohibition applied to the nation at large."

In other words, if the prohibitionists want to give temperance a real boost they will bring pressure to bear on the secretaries of the army and navy for every possible measure to discourage intemperance among soldiers and sailors. It so happens their lapses are conspicuous, where the lapses of civilians go relatively unnoticed, because the civilian is not wearing his country's uniform, but that is no reason for prescribing special treatment. Certainly after burning down the barn to get the horse out in its tragic experience with the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, this country should know that prohibition, however noble in theory and purpose, can be tragic practice.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, October 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows a rather negative state of affairs as far as accomplishment is concerned. It is probable that the continuation of yesterday's pursuit of pleasure will continue, with little change of routine or aspirations. Be discreet and conservative and escape difficulty.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year in which enjoyment, pleasure seeking, spending of funds and energies are accentuated rather than any useful endeavor, although there might be some headway and stability in application to work should it be considered.

A child born on this day has some substantial qualities of mind and character and might make fair success if it could resist the lure of enjoyment.

For Monday, October 26

Monday's astrological forecast is a very interesting one because of its peculiar conflicts and contradictions. The element of the novel, curious and intriguing is accentuated and might lead to an unusual sort of progress or achievement if directed into constructive channels. Private associations especially of an emotional phase also intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which the unusual, bizarre, perhaps eccentric and romantic, may be uppermost, and with profit should they be constructively developed. Creative ability may be engineered into high expression of merit rather than eccentricity and extremes.

A child born on this day may have peculiar talents, probably unique and exceptional, and lucrative if properly developed. It may have a fascinating and intriguing personality.

All businesses must look forward to losing many more employees to the armed services. They must expect that most of their employees of draft age for whom they have secured deferments will soon be called up for military duty, and they should already be training replacements.—Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, economist.

Most important in prolonging life after 50 are sound rules of diet and personal hygiene and suitable attention to the detection of degenerative diseases at the earliest possible moment.—Morris Fishbein, editor of The Journal of the American Medical association.

Any permanent settlement of the Indian problems should be left until after we have won the war. Then the British and the Indians can settle things for themselves.—Sirdar J. J. Singh, president Indian League of America.

The aircraft industry is on the threshold of fulfilling President Roosevelt's appeal for an annual production rate of 60,000 planes — Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

ATHLETE'S FOOT AILMENT

Cases Can Grow Serious If Neglected

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ATHLETE'S FOOT is a good example of a disease which if taken in time is very simple to treat, but if neglected may become very stubborn indeed and almost impossible to eradicate. Everybody is concerned with it because there is probably no disease that deserves the epithet "universal" as well.

Every adult at some time or another has a more or less mild or severe case of athlete's foot. With so universal a disease it is natural that misconceptions about it are widespread. On the basis of my correspondence I think the following facts should be made known:

The cause of the eruption is a small vegetable fungus that is about the appearance and consistency of a spider web. The fungus lives anywhere — on floors, tables, in stockings and shoes—so it is no wonder so many feet come in contact with it, resulting in infection. Of course, anywhere that bare feet are the rule is a hotbed of possible infection—gymnasium, swimming pools, and nowadays, barracks.

It affects only the skin and never invades internal organs. In this it differs from nearly all other fungi and bacteria that affect the human body. I write "it" when I refer to the fungus, but there are many varieties and some of them respond to one treatment and some to another.

The fungi, whatever their variety, multiply only in dead tissue, never in living cells. Therefore if your infection becomes chronic, the fungi are likely to make a place for themselves in the old, peeling skin, or in the toenail bed between the toes, or on the soles of the feet—places where there is an abundant supply of old, dead tissue. Moisture, sweat, scaling and soggy skin make wonderful fertilizer for the ringworm.

Prevention and treatment are therefore fairly obvious. After bathing, dry carefully and thoroughly all the spaces between the toes and other parts of the skin where ringworm is likely to light — the armpits, the groin, any place where skin surfaces come into contact.

A mild alcohol solution—25 or 50 per cent—is a good preventive as an after-bath application. Any toilet water will serve.

Talcum or any toilet powder is also a logical after-bathing preparation.

Any cracks in the skin of the toes should be treated with the application of 10 per cent iodine. Remove crumbly nail material and scaly, crumbly, horny skin from between the toes.

Air your shoes regularly in the sunlight and wear absorbent stockings.

Pledgets of cotton between the toes are good preventatives if there is any tendency to moisture, or cracking.

These rules may seem very simple, but they emphasize the idea that prevention is better (and simpler) than cure.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. M. S., San Francisco, Calif.—Is type B blood the same as our type II? Is type B common or otherwise?

Answer:—Three classifications for blood are used. B in the international nomenclature is the same as III Moss and III Jansky. It is the rarest of any group; seven per cent of the population are in this group.

E. F.—Are raw eggs good for a person with tuberculosis? If so, how many a day? I take three a day; is that too many?

Answer: There is no basis for the widely held belief that a raw egg is more nutritious than a cooked egg. The white of egg uncooked is indigestible, compared to the cooked state. Eggs are part of any balanced diet. Three a day is not too many.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. ## Probation Is Theme Of Christian Science Service For Sunday

"Probation After Death" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read at the morning worship of the Christian Science society at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The Sunday service is also broadcast over station WCLE (610 Kil), Cleveland, the first and third Sundays of each month at 11 a. m.

"Trials are proofs of God's care. Spiritual development germinates not from seed sown in the soil of material hopes, but when these decay, Love propagates anew the higher joys of Spirit, which have no taint of earth."

This society maintains a reading room at 136 S. Broadway, where the Bible and all authorized Christian Science literature may be read, borrowed or purchased. Open from 9:30 to 4 p. m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Rev. Keister Gives 'Some Observations' On 20th Anniversary

Marking his 20th anniversary since taking up the ministry, Rev. George D. Keister will speak on the subject "Some Observations" at 11 a. m. Sunday at the Holy Trinity Lutheran church.

The Sunday school will meet at 9:45. The topic for the older classes is "The Christian and His Bible." The text is taken from the book of Acts of the Apostles 8:26-29. Further religious education will be given the children of the church at 11 o'clock.

"The Holy Bible is God's Book. It is a divinely inspired book. Holy men of old were moved and guided by the Holy Spirit. It holds the top place in the books that are published in this present day. It is more widely read than any other book. It has helped to mould the thought and life of more people than any other volume. These are very broad claims. Yet the true secret of the influence of the Holy Bible is in the fact that it reveals the way of salvation in Jesus Christ. It makes no claim to be a book of history nor a treatise on geography, but does insist that it is truth and life to every believer. The Holy Bible in the home is only of value if it is read, studied and followed. The Holy Bible in one's heart will only be of the highest benefit if its teachings are the compass that guides that life."

Save 10% . . . to Save 100%

All over the nation, patriotic Americans are spending less and saving more—putting at least 10% of their incomes into War Bonds and Stamps. So our boys can have the planes and tanks and guns they need to fight and attack and WIN for us!

So the Nazis and Japs will wish they hadn't tried to enslave America, too—and won't ever try it again!

And it's going to take 10% in War Bonds to do it!

Apples at Front With Observance of Apple Week Oct. 23 to 30

"The food front is as important to the winning of this war as the battlefield," says E. L. Austin, manager of the Ohio Apple Institute.

"Today particular stress is laid upon foods that combat fatigue. Potatoes, vitamins, calories, minerals are more than just words—they have become fighters in the war or democracy."

"Even the luscious, red apple has enlisted for the duration, because in the apple is concentrated so many important minerals and vitamins. . . . An apple contains vitamins A, B, C and G and such body-building minerals as calcium, phosphorus, iron and magnesium. . . . Apples are included in the diet of workers in war industries and the soldiers, sailors and marines throughout the world."

"Apples will be brought more into the national spotlight during National Apple week from Oct. 23 through Oct. 30," according to Austin. "During this week apples are also designated as a victory food special. They will be featured in the produce departments of grocery stores and apple dishes will have a prominent place on the menus of restaurants and hotels."

"Apples are low in price but high in nutritive value. The apple can be served in so many ways that apple dishes never become monotonous. . . . You can enjoy an apple in its raw state, or fried, baked, cooked, made into apple pie, apple sauce, apple dumplings. Anyway you eat it, the apple is a delicious, nourishing food."

Coffee Substitutes Are Being Sought By U. S. Processors

(By Associated Press) NEW YORK, Oct. 24—The widespread coffee scarcity had processors hunting today for substitutes, with almost the frenzy of a housewife haunting the stores for a pound of coffee.

You may be asked to mix a little toasted bran with your coffee to make it go farther, but roasters hope it won't be necessary. They're trying to find a good substitute, or "extender,"—just in case.

As talk of rationing increased one big dealer suggested every other sugar coupon be good also for coffee until formal rationing books could be issued. The shortage was called partly "temporary" and roasters talked of a probable increase in supplies.

Oliver J. Corbett, secretary of the National Retail Tea and Coffee Merchants association, said in Chicago many packers were trying coffee compounds containing as much as 25 per cent roye, malt, Mexican chick peas, soy beans, barley or other cereal.

Corbett said such adulteration was legal if correctly described on each package.

Coffee importers optimistically cited reports that coffee shipments to this country probably would increase soon with a decline in Atlantic ship sinkings and a potential increase in the number of ships available.

While they expect rationing of coffee to come not later than the end of the year, they said it probably would be "generous" or even "temporary."

Pilgrim in MANHATTAN by MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS

Following her mother's death, Chloe Cameron, just 22 and fired with ambition to become a writer and entertainer, leaves her hometown of Wanilla, Oklahoma, and the opportunity to marry Nate Barlow, the town banker. She hopes to find a publisher for her book, "Songs of the Trail" and also sing her own cowboy and Indian songs. But her book is rejected and, after a vain tour of the theatrical agencies, Chloe takes a secretarial position with the Samuels' Bureau of Entertainment.

There she meets Rann Sturgis, prominent lawyer, when he comes in search of entertainers for a Society party. Rann leaves without taking any of Samuels' numbers, but says he may be able to use the "Jack Rabbit Girl" (Chloe's own specialty which she had offered as a last resort) later. Chloe did not mention that she was the "Jack Rabbit Girl." That night, she phones Rann to tell him he left his pen at her office. He is out, so she leaves a message for him to call her. Returning from the store later, Chloe runs into Hugh Richards, the young man who has the apartment next to hers in Greenwich Village. He is rain-soaked and haggard. Hugh asks permission to go through her apartment to his for his belongings, as Brock, the superintendent, locked him out. About to leave, he collapses from hunger in Chloe's apartment. When he comes to, she insists that he change his wet clothes and stay to dinner. The superintendent finds him there when he goes in search of a leak. Despite Hugh's weakened condition, he orders him out. Chloe upbraids Brock for his unkindness and begs Hugh to go to a hospital.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"Your phone's ringing," Brock said to Chloe.

Hugh Richards was beside it. Chloe nodded as he glanced at her, and he laid his things down on the desk and picked up the receiver.

"Hello," he said. And then, incredulously, "Who?"

He put the receiver down and looked at Chloe.

"He says it's Rann Sturgis." "I'll take it," said Chloe.

"Mr. Sturgis?" It seemed an answer to prayer. "Did you lose a pen this afternoon?"

"Yes," with a slightly inquiring infection.

Hugh Richards had sat down beside his bags and was thrusting his clothes inside.

"A gold pen?" Chloe, at the telephone, pressed on.

"With an onyx cap and band," Sturgis added.

How business-like he sounded! He hadn't been like that this afternoon.

"Well, I found it," said Chloe. "In the Samuels Entertainment Bureau after you left."

"That's very kind of you. Is this the young lady—?"

"This is Chloe Cameron, the girl you talked with."

"Thank you very much, Miss Cameron." His voice had altered somewhat. "I thought I'd lost it in a cab."

"If you will come tonight . . . said Chloe.

Brock went toward the door, carrying the bags. Hugh Richards following him. Richards paused in the door.

"Thank you," he said in a low voice.

Chloe signaled him to wait, but he went on.

"Not tonight," Sturgis had answered. "I'm rather rushed. I'll pick it up at your office." And he thanked her again.

She went out into the hall. Brock was just starting down the stairs.

"How much is that apartment?" Chloe asked him.

"Eight dollars a week," said Brock.

"Seven," Hugh Richards contradicted, his hand on the stair rail.

"I made it seven to you," Brock told him, "because you were taking it indefinitely."

"I'm taking it indefinitely, too," said Chloe.

Brock set down the bags. "What about the back rent?" he asked.

"Them three weeks?"

"You're mixed," said Richards. "I'm the one who owes you the back rent. Not the lady."

"I need the room," stated Chloe.

"because of the fire-escape. I don't want the door nailed up. Please come back, both of you."

"Oh, wall-right," said Brock after a pause. He led the way back into the room and deposited the bags on the rug.

Brock had not seen Richards in weeks. Never regular with his rent, since those first months when he had occupied the luxuriously furnished suite on the first floor of 12, he had managed of late entirely to avoid his landlord. And what he did for a living the devil alone knew.

He did nothing, of course. But there must have been a time when he had had work—there in those first months. He had taken the larger apartment on a sub-lease, and when that had expired he had moved into the smaller furnished place which required no lease at all. Being on no lease, it was rented by the week. That suited him better. Mr. Richards had said, as he didn't want to be tied down. He might leave at any time, and again, he might be here a year.

And then he had begun slipping till now you couldn't get hold of him at all. It was no fun to turn a man out. Let those who censured landlords try being one.

Chloe paid Mr. Brock seven dollars and requested a receipt.

"Send up some more heat," she said, mistaking now of an entire floor. "And please carry those bags into the other room."

Hugh Richards stood before the fire, an elbow on the mantel. He was glad he had not had to go down those stairs. It hadn't been so bad coming up, but going down had seemed like stepping off a roof into the night. Everything went black when he glanced down. It was all right now. Objects looked queer, but he could see them.

The room was moving about him in waves, with the table on the crest. The table rode the waves, up and down, without the loss of a dish. The girl walked the waves, back and forth, carrying things from the table to the stove to heat them again. Her dress was a warm rose-color, and she had tousled hair, brown as sandalwood, and flushed cheeks. Once the cat got in her way and she stepped on it. Immediately she apologized but the cat felt humiliated and went and sat under the table, blinking with the fire in its eyes.

Hugh Richards wanted to laugh, but it hurt his side.

"You haven't eaten much," said Chloe, as their dinner neared the end.

Hugh apologized, explaining that he wasn't hungry, when it came to that. Odd, but he wasn't.

She lit the candles on the cake while Hugh Richards drank his coffee and smoked the lily she had of his cigar. Presently she came bearing the cake through the "fire" room, the light of its twenty-three candles on her face.

"Make a wish," she said to Richards, setting the cake before him. Obeyingly he closed his eyes as if in thought.

"Now blow," she said.

He blew. A ripple ran over the mingled flames of the candles. One flame went out.

He had only one chance in twenty-three of having his wish come true. "Want to try again?"

"No. I'm not much of a blower tonight."

Besides, he hadn't made any wish. He hadn't been able to think of anything.

Chloe's wish was easy. I hope that Sturgis man never comes for his pen. Since he wouldn't come tonight, I hope I can keep it—always.

She blew. The taper-flames moved like wind-swept grass. Six flames went out. Six chances out of twenty-two.

"Your turn again," she said to Richards.

He shook his head, negatively. Chloe blew alone on the sixteen candles.

I hope he comes Monday. All the flames went out.

"And now," she said to Hugh Richards, "you're going to bed."

"Not yet, please."

His eyes moved to the banjo clock above the mantel. "Can you see what time it is?"

"Twenty minutes of nine," said Chloe.

He touched his coffee cup, but there was nothing in it. Chloe brought the pot and filled it again.

"Why are you doing this?" he asked when she had sat down again.

"Could I let you go out into the storm?" inquired Chloe, "with no where to go?"

"But hundreds of people are out in the storm with nowhere to go. Were you feeling whimsical because it's your birthday?"

He's better, thought Chloe. I guess it's the coffee.

"Here," she answered, "it may seem odd. But it wouldn't at home. It would seem the only thing to do."

"Where is home?"

"Oklahoma. Out in the ranching country. It would seem odd not to give a stranger a lee-up out there."

"I see. Is that where they leave the doors unlocked and a sign on the ice-box saying, 'Help yourself, but please wash the dishes?'"

"Probably. And speaking of dishes—"

There was a knock at the door, and Gay Hinkle blew in. She wore a long black-velvet cloak that dis-

"Look!" she exclaimed by way of greeting, and snatched up her twinkling skirts, extending a slim leg. "Just as I was starting. My last pair."

Chloe went over to the chest and opened a drawer that contained stockings. Gay sat down beside the fire and her eye fell on Richards.

"Oh, good evening," she said pleasantly. And to Chloe, "I don't know you had company."

Struthers Eleven Hands Quakers Fourth Straight Loss, 19-6

ACCURATE PASSING OF NOVOTNY GIVES REDS TWO TALLIES

Entriaken's Last Quarter Toss To Walt Brian Scores for Salem

A general lack of aggressiveness and an inadequate pass defense proved the downfall of the Salem High Quakers as they bowed to the Big Red of Struthers, 19-6, before a throng of 2,800 fans at Reilly stadium last night. The loss was the fourth in a row for Salem.

Capt. Ben Barrett's eleven, sparked by the accurate passing arm of Jim Novotny and the shifty running of Dick Whitsett, was too much for the Quakers, who did not tally until the final period.

The game was only four plays old when Novotny broke loose on a reverse around right end for 47 yards and the first score of the evening. Tom Phillips attempted placement went wide.

The Big Red notched another score in the second quarter when Novotny began to hit his receivers with monotonous accuracy in a drive which carried 40 yards. Larry McDonald, stellar left end, pulled in the halfback's aerial in the end zone for the touchdown. Novotny then planned for the score.

Spiko Blocks Punt
Two thrusts into Salem territory in the third period were stopped by pass interceptions but a third brought another tally just as the fourth quarter got under way. The trouble began in the closing seconds of the third frame when Center Ed Spiko broke through the Salem line to block one of Dick Culbertson's kicks. The pivot man recovered the ball on the Salem eight-yard line.

On the first play in the closing chapter, Novotny hurried a pass to Fullback Bill Renstrom in the end zone for the third and final score. A pass for the extra point was knocked down.

The locals scored midway through the quarter when one of Culbertson's booming punts set the Big Red back on its own 25. A clipping penalty put the ball on the 15. Novotny fumbled on the 18 two plays later and the ball was recovered by a host of Salem men.

Frank "Flick" Entriaken passed to Walt Brian in the end zone for the score after an end run had put the ball on the 13-yard stripe. Glenn Weigand's try for extra point was wide.

Statistics Favor "Red"
The statistics gave the Big Red a huge margin over the Quakers, showing 12 first downs to five for Salem, 335 yards gained from scrimmage to the locals' 99, and seven pass completions for the victors in 14 attempts as compared to the locals' mark of one successful heave out of 14 attempts.

Outstanding in the Struthers win were Novotny, Whitsett, and Line-men Ned Flack, McDonald and Ed Spiko. These three stalwarts of the

GROVE, MERCER STAR IN GOSHEN TRIUMPH

Scoring once in the first quarter and again in the third period, the Goshen High eleven tripped Augusta, 14-7, at Damascus yesterday to bring their season record to three wins and three losses.

Grove scored the first touchdown when he galloped 40 yards to the August one, from where he plunged over. He also plunged for the extra point. A pass, Grove to G. Kovich, from the 35 to the 10, put the ball in scoring position in the third quarter. Mercer plunged over from the 10 and then cracked the line for the extra point.

Augusta made its score in the third period when Fullback Fyck climaxed a sustained march of 55 yards with a plunge for the tally. The Augusta total ran to seven a second later as he plunged over for the point.

Goshen will trek to Salineville for a game next Thursday.

PRESIDENT OPPOSES DRAFT BILL CLAUSE

senate reaction to a letter from President Roosevelt to Senator Gurney (R-SD) opposing any restrictive amendments.

"It appeared to me," the President wrote Gurney, "that the complicated administration necessarily involved in the handling of large numbers of men by the Army, as well as the urgent necessity for correcting the present deficiencies as to age, make it important that limitations other than those now included in the bill be avoided." Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, insisted in a letter also read by Gurney that if the amendment were adopted the Army would have to "put thousands and thousands of men on the shelf after their essential training had been completed."

Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) countered with the assertion that Army officials had said it would take 12 months to train inductees, but Senator Taft (R-Ohio) contended the Army had "not the slightest intention" of training men that long before it sent them abroad.

Controversy Rages As Cannon Return To Cemetery Duty

value they represent they are doing no good whatsoever at the present time. I personally question whether sentiment should enter into this unfortunate controversy when the seriousness of the situation is considered. Our country needs every pound of scrap metal that can be gathered in order to supply our military forces with the necessary equipment so they can fight and win this greatest of all wars.

"To your query, 'Are the cannon in Gettysburg being confiscated?' my answer is another question: What would the members of the Grand Army of the Republic do or say if they were here to see and know what is going on and what we are facing today? They fought to free the slaves and to preserve our Union. Today our armed forces are fighting all over the world to preserve the freedom not only of our own glorious country but to make all the people of all the world free!"

"I think I know what their answer would be! But apparently their legal offspring, the Sons of Union Veterans, a patriotic organization, does not realize the seriousness of this situation. 'In view of the above outlined facts, as a member of the board of trustees of Hope Cemetery association, I must inform you that said trustees assume the responsibility for your action in demanding the return of the cannon. I intend to endeavor to inform the people of this community as to the reason for the return of the cannon from the scrap pile and to see to it that the responsibility for such action is placed where it belongs, on the shoulders of Philip Triem, camp No. 43, Sons of Union Veterans.'

State Water Survey Reaches Columbiana County Whose Rainfall Is Below Average

If a strange man comes to the Columbiana county farmer's door in the next few weeks inquiring about water supply, the farmer need not be surprised because the Ohio Water Supply board will be conducting an investigation in the county. The purpose is to determine from what source water is pumped and how adequate the supply is in dry times.

A water table survey is in progress throughout the state, sponsored by the Ohio Water Supply board and directed in each county by the county agricultural agent. The ground water is being studied.

Explained By Chart

As is illustrated in the accompanying sketch, not all of the rainfall is available as ground water in wells because much of it runs off, evaporates, is transpired by plants and is in other ways disposed of. But then, we need not be concerned if we lose a little water the first time around, because according to the hydrologic cycle, it will be around again—sooner or later.

On an average the state of Ohio receives 37.92 inches of rainfall annually.

In Columbiana county the rainfall is gaged by the U. S. Weather bureau at Millport and the normal annual rainfall at this station is 37.46, or 0.46 inches below the average for the state.

The Ohio Water Supply board, created by the legislature in 1941, is charged with the job of studying Ohio's ground and surface waters in order to forestall water shortages in the future. The study now being conducted in Columbiana county is a part of the general survey which will eventually cover the entire state.
